PUBLICATIONS

Book

Voices from Beyond: Physiology, Sentience and the Uncanny in Eighteenth-Century French Literature, University of Virginia Press, in press (April 2022), 240 pp.

Voices from Beyond won the 2021 Walker Cowen Memorial Prize for outstanding scholarship in eighteenth-century studies. It is an interdisciplinary and transnational study of the voice, as it was constructed in French works, influenced by French vocal sciences as well as British literary and philosophical works. This book, in particular, interrogates the philosophical and literary works of well-known and lesser-known French and British writers – including Jean-Jacques Rousseau, Samuel Richardson, Denis Diderot, François Baculard d’Arnaud and Jacques Cazotte, and explores how their texts theorize, represent and construct three inter-related vocal types: the sentimental, the vitalist and the uncanny. These vocal types are connected insofar as the conception of sentimental and vitalist voices – anchored to a physiological understanding of vocal organs—paradoxically led to the development of a disembodied, uncanny voice.

Book in Progress

In Nature's Darkness: the Black Atlantic on French Stages.

In Nature's Darkness examines how eighteenth-century French theater responded to the increasing presence of the Black Atlantic in French Atlantic spaces. In this study, I trace three stages of representational strategies: from colonial attempts to control the Black and French Atlantic, through an implicit recognition of the Black Atlantic's presence in domestic spaces, to an overt celebration of the Black Atlantic's role in Republican life.

Digital Projects

Eighteenth-Century Theatrical Repertoires of France (related to In Nature's Darkness)

This project seeks to re-create the advertised repertoire of French theaters. By training a Natural Language Processing algorithm to detect theatrical information, I have extracted from over 2000 newspapers performances that occurred in Bordeaux from 1784 to 1790. I am currently expanding this project to include newspapers from Paris, Lyon, Bordeaux, Nantes that were published between 1750 and 1800. This digital work will help me contextualize the dramatic works in my project as well as identify theatrical networks that spanned the French and possibly even Black Atlantic worlds.

Multimedia in the Long Eighteenth Century (related to Voices from Beyond)

Multimedia in the Long Eighteenth Century (MMLEC) is an extension of my book project, Voices from Beyond. It seeks to add empirical evidence to my book's narrative on the deployment of music in novels. To that end, it quantifies the frequency with which musical paratext, including both lyrics and musical notation, appear in English- and French-language novels published between 1688 and 1815.
