

<https://www.bustle.com/p/why-donald-trump-jrs-kim-kardashian-tweet-from-2011-is-back-in-the-spotlight-8519812>

Why Donald Trump Jr.'s Kim Kardashian Tweet From 2011 Is Back In The Spotlight

Monica Hunter-Hart 4 hours ago

As the first family of the United States, as well as a family that grew up in a world of celebrity and tabloid gossip, the Trumps face their lives being highly scrutinized. So when Donald Trump Jr. and his wife filed for divorce on Thursday and asked for "privacy," many saw the request as a bit ironic — especially because Trump Jr. has relished publicly jeering celebrity divorces in the past. A seven-year-old tweet from Trump Jr. that was re-shared a ton on Friday showed him doing just that.

In the Oct. 31, 2011 tweet, he reacts to Kim Kardashian's split from basketball player Kris Humphries. Kardashian filed for divorce just 72 days after their wedding. Trump Jr. apparently found that hilarious.

"Kim Kardishian [sic] is getting a divorce," he tweeted. "I can't believe I lost the office pool by betting the under on 3 weeks. Thought that was easy money!!!"

Like his father, Trump Jr. often uses Twitter these days to share blunt views, pick fights, and insult people. It seems he's been doing so for years. On Friday, many Twitter users ridiculed him for the Kardashian tweet as news spread of his divorce.

"So is it like a Trump thing to have a tweet for everything?" one person wrote.

"Show proper respect everybody," another joked about Trump's divorce, embedding the Kardashian tweet.

One user tweeted at President Donald Trump: "Too bad you didn't bet in the pool on @DonaldJTrumpJr divorce rumours @realDonaldTrump," they wrote. "Maybe you can still get in on the action." Yep, karma hurts.