

NEW QUEER MEDIEVALISMS

This series explores new directions in the study of gay, lesbian, transgender, intersex, and asexual medieval identities and, simultaneously, will expand the work of the queer Middle Ages beyond early English or continental studies. As Annemarie Jagose points out, "Queer [...] exemplifies a more mediated relation to categories of identification." Touching on other forms of identity, Jagose's definition of queer demonstrates how binaries which involve gender, sexuality, and culture often fail to account for a full range of experiences. Medievalists have done important work in queer studies, and this series expands on the work done by some of these theorists. Almost every area of Medieval Studies (history, religion, philosophy) has a dedicated group of scholars interrogating the connections between medieval topics and Queer Studies. This series will provide these scholars with a new venue dedicated to their work but also bring various scholarly and geographic areas into conversation.

Geographical Scope

Global

Chronological Scope

400–1500

Keywords

Queer; gender; medieval; medievalism; transgender; sexuality; religion; history

Further Information

To submit a proposal or learn more about New Queer Medievalisms, please contact the Acquisitions Editor, Ilse Schweitzer Van Donkelaar (ilse.s.vand@gmail.com)

Publishing with Medieval Institute Publications

MIP's publication series provide a space for exploring what it has meant to be human through the ages, using literary, historical, and material sources and by employing innovative, popular, or interdisciplinary approaches. MIP offers rapid turn-around times, the newest digital policies (including full Open Access compliance), and global distribution. In North America books can be purchased through ISD and in Europe and the rest of the world through NBN International.

Forthcoming in this Series

Mapping the Queer in Medieval English and French Literature, edited by Will Rogers and Christopher Michael Roman

Detail of Ami and Amant from a late fourteenth-century copy of Le Roman de la Rose. British Library MS Additional 42133, fol. 49v.

SERIES EDITORS

CHRISTOPHER MICHAEL ROMAN

Kent State University

WILL ROGERS

University of Louisiana-Monroe

SERIES ADVISORY BOARD

MICHELLE M. SAUER

University of North Dakota

ANNA KŁOSOWSKA

Miami University

GABRIELLE BYCHOWSKI

Case Western Reserve University

BILL BURGWINKLE

King's College, Cambridge